Reddiquette Dos - General

Do adhere to the same standards of behavior online that you follow in real life.

Do when talking to someone you might want to ask yourself "Would I say it to the person's face?"

Do read the reddiquette. Read it again every once in a while.

Do moderate based on quality, not opinion.

Do use proper grammar and spelling.

Do vote.

Do consider posting constructive criticism / an explanation when you downvote something.

Do report any spam you find.

Do browse the new submissions page and vote on it.

Do actually read an article before you vote on it.

Do state your reason for any editing of posts.

Do use an "Innocent until proven guilty" mentality.

Reddiquette Dos - Submissions

Do Read the rules of a community before making a submission.

Do keep your submission titles factual and opinion free.

Do look for the original source of content, and submit that.

Do post to the most appropriate community possible.

Do search for duplicates before posting.

Do link to the direct version of a media file when the page it was found on doesn't add any value.

Do link to canonical and persistent URLs where possible, not temporary pages that might disappear.

Do feel free to post links to your own content, within reason.

Do posts containing explicit material such as nudity, horrible injury etc, add NSFW.

Do read over your submission for mistakes before submitting.

Reddiquette Don'ts - General

Don't engage in illegal activity.

Don't post someone's personal information.

Don't repost deleted/removed information.

Don't be (intentionally) rude at all.

Don't follow those who are rabble rousing against another redditor without first investigating both sides of the issue that's being presented.

Don't ask people to Troll others on reddit, in real life, or on other blogs/sites.

Don't conduct personal attacks on other commenters.

Don't start a flame war.

Don't insult others.

Don't troll.

Don't take moderation positions in a community where your profession, employment, or biases could pose a direct conflict of interest to the neutral and user driven nature of reddit.

Reddiquette Don'ts - Voting

Don't downvote an otherwise acceptable post because you don't personally like it.

Don't mass downvote someone else's posts.

Don't moderate a story based on your opinion of its source.

Don't upvote or downvote based just on the person that posted it.

Don't report posts just because you do not like them.

Reddiquette Don'ts - Promoting Posts

Don't hint at asking for votes.

Don't conduct polls using the title of your submission and/or votes.

Don't send out IMs, tweets, or any other message asking people to vote for your submission.

Don't ask for upvotes in exchange for gifts or prizes.

Don't create mass downvote or upvote campaigns.

Reddiquette Don'ts - Submissions

Don't use the word "BREAKING" or other time sensitive words in your submissions.

Don't post hoaxes.

Don't flood reddit with a lot of stories in a short span of time.

Don't write titles in ALL CAPS.

Don't editorialize or sensationalize your submission title.

Don't linkjack stories: linking to stories via blog posts that add nothing extra.

Don't use link shorteners to post your content.

Reddiquette Don'ts - Comments

Don't make comments that lack content.

Don't announce your vote.

Don't complain about other users reposting/rehosting stories, images, videos, or any other content.

Don't complain about the votes you do or do not receive.

Don't complain about reposts. Just because you have seen it before doesn't mean everyone has.

Don't complain about cross posts.
